Para pensar

En español decimos «había un castillo» y «había muchos caballos», siempre con «había». En inglés, ¿se dice igual para uno que para muchos?

Explicación

From there is to there was

You already know there is and there are (hay): «There is a park near my house», «There are two cinemas in my town». To talk about the past we use there was and there were (había, hubo).

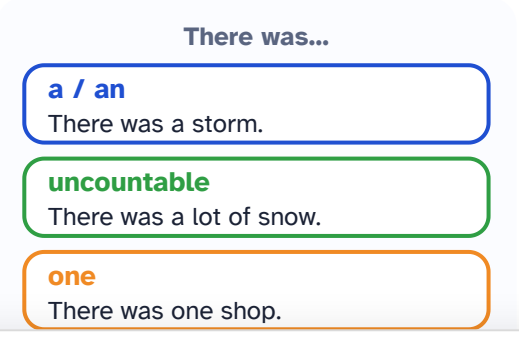

En castellano: «hay» pasa a ser «había». En inglés, el singular pasa a was y el plural a were, igual que el verbo to be: is → was, are → were.

Present	Past
There is a park.	There was a park.
There are trees.	There were trees.

There was: singular

Use there was with one thing (a / an / one) and with uncountable nouns (nombres incontables: water, food, snow, money): «There was a big storm last night», «There was an old tree in the square», «There was a lot of snow in the mountains».

The short form there's is only for the present. In the past we always write there was in full. En castellano: «había una tormenta», «había mucha nieve».

Use there were with two or more things: «There were twenty children in the classroom», «There were some beautiful shells on the beach», «There were lots of people at the concert».

Careful with the first noun in a list: «There was a table and two chairs» (the first noun is singular) but «There were two chairs and a table». En castellano: mira la palabra que va justo detrás para elegir was o were.

Negatives: there wasn't, there weren't

Negative: there wasn't (was not) and there weren't (were not). With plural and uncountable nouns we usually add any: «There wasn't a swimming pool», «There weren't any cars in 1800», «There wasn't any milk in the fridge».

We can also say there was no / there were no: «There were no mobile phones when my grandma was a child». En castellano: «no había móviles». Ojo: nunca uses dos negaciones juntas («weren't no»).

dinosaurs in Spain?» – «Yes, there were!».

To ask about quantity: «How many people were there?» (countable) and «How much food was there?» (uncountable). En castellano: «¿Cuántas personas había?», «¿Cuánta comida había?».

My town in the past

We use there was / there were to describe places long ago: «A hundred years ago there weren't any supermarkets in my town. There was a small market in the square. There were lots of farms and there was a railway station. There wasn't any electricity in some houses».

Compare with today using there is / there are: «Now there is a big supermarket and there are two schools». Consejo: pregunta a tus abuelos cómo era su pueblo y escríbelo en inglés.

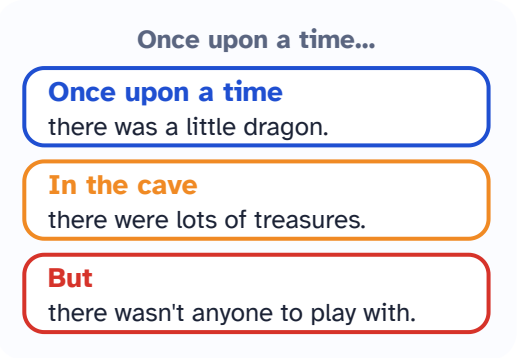

Telling a story

Stories often start with there was or there were to present the place and the

We use it to describe a scene: «When we arrived at the party, there was music and there were balloons everywhere». En castellano: «Érase una vez un dragón...» se dice en inglés «Once upon a time there was a dragon...».

Reading: a school trip to a castle

Read Nerea's text: «Last Friday we visited a castle. It was very old. Many years ago, there were soldiers and horses there. There was a big kitchen with a huge fireplace, but there wasn't a bathroom! There were some secret tunnels under the castle. «Were there any ghosts?» asked Mario. «No, there weren't», said the guide. «But there was a very old cat!». We all laughed.»

How many times do you see there was? And there were?

Let's practise: memory game

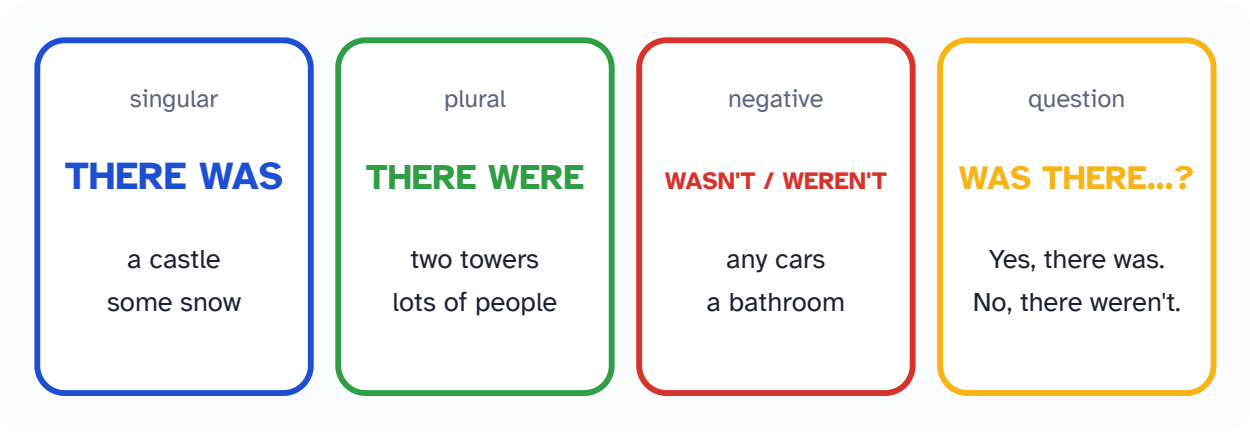

Look at a picture of a room for one minute. Then close your eyes. Your partner asks: «Was there a lamp?», «How many books were there?». Answer: «Yes, there was», «There were three books». Who remembers more?
