Can and can't: abilities

Nombre: _____ Fecha: _____

Qué vas a aprender

- Say what you can and can't do (lo que sabes y no sabes hacer)
- Use can with all persons without -s
- Ask «Can you...?» and give short answers
- Describe the abilities of animals and people

Para pensar

Un pez sabe nadar, pero no sabe trepar a un árbol. Un mono sí trepa, pero nada fatal. ¿Cómo dirías en inglés lo que cada uno sabe hacer?

Explicación

What does can mean?

We use `can` to talk about abilities: things that we know how to do or that we are able to do. «I can ride a bike», «My baby sister can walk», «Birds can fly».

En castellano: can se traduce como «puedo» o «sé»: «I can swim» es «sé nadar». En español usamos «saber» para lo que hemos aprendido (sé leer) y «poder» para lo que somos capaces de hacer (puedo levantar esto). En inglés, para las dos cosas basta con una palabra: can.

Can: the same for everybody

The great thing about can is that it never changes. It's the same with all persons: I can, you can, he can, she can, it can, we can, they can. We never say «she cans».

After can, the verb goes in its normal form, without to and without -s: «She can swim», not «She can swims» or «She can to swim». En castellano: el orden es igual que en español: «ella sabe nadar» → «she can swim».

Can't: the negative

To say that you are not able to do something, use `can't` (or cannot, written together): «I can't whistle» (no sé silbar), «Penguins can't fly», «My grandpa can't use the computer».

We often use but to join a positive and a negative sentence: «I can swim, but I can't dive». Pronunciación: en inglés británico, can't suena con una «a» larga («cant»), y can suena más corto y débil. Escucha bien la t final para saber si es afirmativa o negativa.

Action verbs

To talk about abilities, we need action verbs. Here are some useful ones: run (correr), jump (saltar), swim (nadar), climb (trepar), dance (bailar), sing (cantar), skate (patinar), ride a bike (montar en bici), play the guitar (tocar la guitarra), cook (cocinar), draw (dibujar), whistle (silbar).

Act them out: one person mimes a verb and the others guess. «You can skate!». Moving your body helps you remember the words.

Questions: Can you...?

To ask about abilities, put Can at the beginning: «Can you swim?», «Can your dog jump high?», «Can they speak English?». We don't need do or does: can is a helper itself.

Short answers: «Yes, I can.» / «No, I can't.», «Yes, it can.» / «No, it can't.». En castellano: «¿Sabes nadar?» → «Can you swim?». Fíjate que solo se cambia el orden: can pasa delante de la persona.

How well? Very well, quite well, a little

We can say how well we do something with these words at the end of the sentence: «I can swim very well» (muy bien), «I can draw quite well» (bastante bien), «I can cook a little» (un poco), «I can't dance at all» (nada de nada).

This is useful to be honest and precise. Nobody can do everything perfectly! En castellano: no digas «very good» para esto: good describe cosas (a good book) y well describe cómo se hace algo (I sing well).

Amazing animals

Animals have incredible abilities. A cheetah can run very fast. A kangaroo can jump very far, but it can't walk backwards. A dolphin can swim and jump out of the water. A parrot can talk, a spider can make webs and a chameleon can change colour.

But there are things they can't do: elephants can't jump, snakes can't hear like us and ostriches can't fly, although they are birds. Reto: busca un animal y escribe dos cosas que can y una que can't hacer.

Animal	can ✓	can't ✗
kangaroo	jump	walk backwards
ostrich	run	fly
parrot	talk	swim
elephant	swim	jump

Reading: our talent show

Read the poster: «Talent Show! Friday at 5 p.m. in the school hall. Come and see our stars! Marta can juggle with five balls. Yusuf can play the violin very well. The twins Leo and Pau can dance hip hop, but they can't sing. Carmen can't dance, but she can tell very funny jokes. And our teacher, Mr Ruiz, can do magic tricks! Can you do something special? Talk to Mr Ruiz before Wednesday.»

Answer: Who can play the violin? Can the twins sing? What can Mr Ruiz do?

Talent Show

- Marta — can juggle
- Yusuf — can play the violin
- Leo and Pau — can dance, can't sing
- Carmen — can tell jokes

Let's practise: find someone who...

Play Find someone who... Your teacher gives you a card with abilities: «Find someone who can whistle», «...who can touch their nose with their tongue», «...who can count to 20 in English», «...who can stand on one leg for 30 seconds».

Walk around the class and ask: «Can you whistle?». If they answer «Yes, I can», they show you and you write their name. At the end, report: «Ana can whistle. Pedro can't whistle, but he can stand on one leg». ¡Gana quien complete antes la tarjeta!

Find someone who can...

- whistle — Ana
- count to 20 — Pedro
- stand on one leg —
- draw a horse —
